The inaugural Blue Sky Festival is being held on Saturday 17th March from 10 am to 4pm in the Sculpture Park and Jacoby Street, Mundaring. The Festival is an opportunity for hills' residents to celebrate and understand how they can ensure a positive and sustainable future through living responsibly and with care in their local community and natural environment. In the spirit of these values, the festival is non-commercial and a minimal waste event.

At the Festival you can participate in workshops, visit information stalls and attend talks on a range of issues that include themes such as Energy, Water, Waste, Biodiversity, The Built Environment, Fire Mitigation, Local Food and Transport. You will take home with you some ideas and information on how to be a more sustainable community member!

The Festival will also have a focus on the "next generation" and asks what will be our legacy be for those living here in the future?

An exciting list of speakers already include local "experts" such as Ross Mars, sharing information on Grey water systems, Jenny Currell on the Solar scheme for pensioners, Travis Hargraves on Battery storage technology, Rohan Caboon on Fire mitigation and Jeff Thierfelder will be addressing Local Food Security, Other speakers and workshops will be announced on the Festival facebook page as they are confirmed.

In addition to the programme of activities there will also be music, food vans and fun activities for all the family, including a locally built Tiny House on Wheels to explore!

The Festival is being facilitated by volunteers from community groups that share common values of highlighting the importance of environmental issues and sustainability in the Mundaring Hills. They include; Mundaring in Transition (MiT), Glen Forrest Community Garden, EMRC, Mundaring Environmental Advisory Committee and Eastern Hills Branch of the Wildflower Society of WA. It is supported by the Shire of Mundaring, the Mundaring Branch of the Bendigo Bank and Lotterywest.
